FOLLOW THE RESOLUTIONS.

A General Meeting of the ninety fix Managers of the Charity Work-house being this day called, hyorder of a Meeting of the fifteen Managers of the 15th current, and William Caracia chosen Prese.—The Treasures acquainted the Meeting, that he had put the books of the House into the hands of Mr Forrest the city's accomptant to make our from them a statement of the present stuation of the affairs of the House.—That Mr Forrest had accordingly made up a report, the tunor of which

Imp, That the debt of the House on the 1st of July 1785, amounted to

The Treasurer thought it his duty to lay this statement before the Managers, and begged they would take some essential measures for the support of the credit of the House, which was every day diminishing, and now almost exhausted.

In consequence of this statement of the affairs of the House, and the request of the Treasurer, the Prefer tegged leave to recal the attention of the Managers, to what he had proposed upon a similar statement of the affairs of the House in July 1783, which had been followed by an order from the Honostrable Council for a general voluntary contribution.—The consequences, he aid, of a partial relief, without having an established fund for the maintainance of the poor of the city, was now apparent; and differs like the prefent would again recur, if no other means were taken than voluntary contributions.—He represented, that notwithstanding the utmost attention and frugality observed in the management of the sands of the Charley, that it has seen sound, from the experience of many years, that they have never been sufficient for the maintainance of the norms.

That it appeared from the books, that the annual expenditure for many years had exceeded the annual income 678 t. y dupon an average.

That it appeared from the books, that the annual expenditure for many years had exceeded the annual income 678 k y dippon an average.

That voluntary contributions had often been tried, and many of them had even been liberal, for the relief of the Charity, but that they ferved only as temporary aids. That the measure was only a tax upon a few of the benevotent, while many from disapprobation at the mode, others from indolence, inattention, or parfimony, did not contribute at all. That if such a mode was again proposed little successould be expected. He said, for instance, that the respectable incorporation of Goldsmiths at the last contribution had transmitted twenty guineas, but accompanied the donation with a letter, saying, "That though they have no fort of doubt, that the Charity is properly managed under the present Directors, yet they are resolved to give no more aid to the Charity Work-house, unlefs a proper application shall be made for affelting the inhabitants of Edinburgh, e- qually and proportionally for the Charity; as the Incorporation is sensible, that a great part of the most opquent of the importance of the sum of the su

IV. That it is the opinion of this Meeting, that if sufficient and permanent funds cannot be provided for the support of this Charity in an amicable way, account should be had to the laws of the country established for maintaining the poor, to prevent the total ruin of an institution so beneficial and humane.

VI. That it is the opinion of this Meeting, that the above Resolutions be transmitted to the Right Honourable the Lord Provost, and the Honourable Magistrates and Council, for their consideration.

These Resolutions being seconded and agreed to by the whole Meeting, except Mr John Dickson Advocate, Mr Isaac Grant, and Mr Janes Fraser, writers to the signet, who objected to Resolutions 2d, 3d, and 4th, Mr Greech then moved, That, in order to ascertain who were entitled to the benefit of the Charity, and to prevent impositions upon it, the Honourable Council should be requested to order the names and numbers in the families in the different parishes of this city to be annually taken in the month of June: That no person whose name and designation was not found in the parish-booksshould be ensitled to the benefit of the Charity: That hence every poor person entitled to the city's Charity would be relieved upon application, and the begging poor might be prevented from instelling the streets, and sent to their respective parishes: That a book, in such form as the following specimen, should be kept by every parish for this purpose:

Name of the Family | Place and Time | Number of the | Number of Servants, and Profession. | Place and Time | Family. | Number of Servants, and their Names. | Lodgers. REMARKS

This motion was unanimously agreed to.

Mr Grace concluded with moving, That this Meeting do also inform the Honourable Council, that the Managers of the Charity Workhouse, however much they are inclined to serve the cause of Charity, and to take their share of duty for the public good, yet they cannot struggle with impossibilities; and if any persons in the community are inclined to take charge of the funds, so as to make them better answer the purposes of the Institution, the Managers are willing to resign their places; and they leave it to the Honourable Council, or the different Societies and Incorporations of the city, to appoint the successor.—This motion was also unanimously agreed to.

It was then moved, That a Minute of this day's transactions be forthwith conveyed to the Right Honourable the Logrovost and Honourable Council; which being agreed to, was ordered accordingly.

The above names were read over at the table, and are to be certified to the Clerk of the Crown by the Speaker. The act impowers three Judges, one from the Court of King's Bench, one from the Common-Pleas, and a Baron of the Exchequer, to meet and ballot forty Members only out of those chofen by the Commons. A commission is then to be made out under the Great Seal, by which authority they are to act. The names marked with an aftreism (*) were not in the Ministerial lift, but all the others were. Mr Sheridan made a complaint yesterday to the House of Commons, of some of the lists having been delivered to the House by the door-keeper, previous to the ballot—a practice not uncommon in that Great Assembly:—the writer of a morning paper says, it ought furely to be a common cause with both fides of the House, to preserve, at least, an outward decency and decorum of proceedings, and to keep from the public eye, as much as possible, the influence of Government on the one fide, or party management on the other. This collusive doctrine we reprobate, as well as the practice itself. The public ought to fee and know that Ministry give orders to the door-keeper publicly to furnish every Members, as he passed into the House, with a list of judges, to be by him deposited on the table, as the adopted names of uninfluenced choice and deliberate prefer-

Yesterday the Directors of the India Company agreed to postpone the appointment of a Governor General until Wednesday next. We are considertly assured that Mr Dundas will go to India as Governor-General, in the room of Mr Hastings. St J. Chron. Yesterday Colonel Drummond was introduced to his Majesty at St James's by Sir Guy Carteson, and made his appearance in a full fuit of Highland dress. Yesterday the Duke of St Alban's was at the levee at St James's, and presented to the King, on his coming to the title. All the ships of war now on the tocks on Government account in the merchants yards will be finished in the course of the present year, which will make an addition of ten fail of the life and nine frigates to our naval force, besides four that will be launched from the King's yards. Admiral Innes, when the last etters left the Island of Jamaica, was preparing to come home from that station in the Europa of sifty guns; the same ship in which he went to the West-Indies.

A question highly deserving the consideration of Members, and particularly of the Country Gentlemen, with respect to the fortifications, is, that they will require an additional land force of at least $5,000 entailed on our posterity is not all. It makes an alarming addition to the standing army of the king-dom—a thing from which every Englishman's mind must revolt.

When Mr Boswell related to Mr Wilkes his late adventure of having his pocket picked of his hand-kerchief, that never-failing wit hinted, that there might be fome oftentation in a Scotchman to have it

If we may give credit to letters received from Armonay, the Mess. Montgolsier, brothers, have a length discovered the means of directing the balloon. They add, that these ingenious gentlemen have constructed a globe of so extensive a diameter, as to carry a confiderable quantity of goods. They mean to elevate themselves with this machine, and to direct their route to Paris, or wherever his Majety shall be pleased to order. They have applied to Parliament for 60,000 livres to enable them to construct this globe, with which they will carry a oad of 30,000 lib. together with nine perfons.

By the most authentic accounts from New York, we are affured, that almost every day brings' fresh proofs of the anarchy that prevails throughout the American provinces. The four fpirit which was engendered by the civil wars, and was vented against the loyal fubjects of Great-Britain, now ferments. Congress possesses only the shadow of authority. New states spring up, and assume the powers of self-government. Each state exercises within itself the sall powers of independent legislation, both internal and external. The want of credit and of money have reduced the different communities to act in the public and private creditors whateversterms they The men of property, who are but few in number, bend their utmost efforts to collect their wealth, and are in halte to migrate to other countries.

Letters from Madrid, by the last mail, mention, that four ships of the line and eight transports, having on board detachments from different regiments garrifooed in Old-Spain, failed the beginning of latt month from Ferrol for South-America, his Majesty being determined to pay the closest attenuon to the feeds of commotion which have begun to forout forth in his extensive dominions in the New-World.

The last letters from Amsterdam mention, that the Dutch East India Company have come to a refoliation to take up three more thips, which are to

By a letter from Bar-le-Duc, in Lorraine, we have the following intelligence, which is announced to be a fact: " The public executioner of Landau, who is looked on as an adept in the art of decollating, received an anonymous letter last week from Nancy, the capital of Lorraine, by which he was ordered, on a day appointed, to be at the gate of that town, and to take with him the best axe. He obeyed the order, and when he came to the fpot, was feized by three armed men, and estreated not to re-fift; they then blindfolded him, and put him into a post-chaife. After travelling about twelve hours he was conducted into an apartment hung round with black, and having many lamps to light it. The napkin with which his eyes were covered was in-fantly taken off. A tall man, in a malk, pointed to a person on the sloor, whose head was in a sick.

The executioner was ordered to strike off the head; he refused; the man threatened him with a brace of pistols; he was at length forced to obey. When the execution was over he received a purfe of two hundred louis, was then blindfolded once more, put into the same chaife, and carried to the place where he was taken up. Extract of a letter from London, Feb. 16. The House of Commons met to day, agreeable to their adjournment of yesterday, but transacted nothing worth mentioning.

"Several interviews have been lately had be tween a certain Heir-apparent and a great Perfonage, respecting the arrears his Highness is in on account of repairs to his palace, &c. and which, with his o-ther debts, amount, it is faid, to near two hundred thousand pounds. The Cabinet are not averse to the bringing it before Parliament, but with to delay the business for a few months. This, however, is thought to be by no means agreeable to his Highnels, who prefies the matter for an early confideration; and it is more than probable that he will be gratified in his withes, as there is nothing the Minister endeavours more than to stand well in his opi-occurred where the expences have been so moderate.

It is computed that fince the 1st of January, 1766. the area of the city of Dublin has increased two hundred acres, and the inhabitants 20,000; an accretion greater in proportion than that of any other city in Europe. SEE advertifed in the Edinburgh newfpa Masked Ball, which is proposed to be had at Dunn's Rooms on the 2d of next month, and which is understood to be patronifed by performed the first distinction in this country and city.

I have had the honour to be uniformly a fine friend to the Land of Cakes, and of good feater and I think it necessary for me to give this filly ex-pensive amusement my black ball in the most public manner, through the channel of your newly and in every other way that I can possibly cont to check the first introduction of an amulement compatible with decorum, and the good flate of the fociety, in which I have the happiness to find the capital of my native country remaining, notwithhad-ing the influence of ill example from the highest rank in it, and the contagion of a wealthy and laxarious metropolis in England.

I think it unnecessary, on this occasion, to you a differtation upon morals, and content myst with declaring, that, backed by the highest authority in this our British Empire, (as we are pleased to call it), and by a yet higher authority, that of inopinion higher than that of the highest in this place, in opposition to a diversion which is unsuitable to the modelty of the fex, and the circumflances of nware of the difplenfare which this ftrance will give to the giddier and more thought-less part of the community; but I have always been very indifferent about the discontent of those who, carried along with the stream of fathion, have not presence of mind, or leifure to see whither they are going; nor could the most engagin, manners, the highest rank, or the charms of the fex, even if they were accompanied by the graces of beauty, untarnished by age and disfipation, persuade me to approve of what I think must have an evident and inmediate tendency to lower my fair countrywomen, and my fellow-citizens, in the efteem of the public.

I am, Mr Printer, a man neither unreasonably ne gid in my manners, nor inaccessible to the touch of lawful pleafure; but I am a man who have always bravely opposed myself to error and improduced even when they have been supported by the highest tide of fathion; and I have always endeavoured to deferve the appellation which I now affume, ALBANICUS.

To the Printer of the Caledonian Mercary. EXPERIENCE THE BEST INSTRUCTOR.

N Profecution of schemes visionary, though sublime, the mind is tortured and pleafed. A number of facts feem to spring up, and lead the active on. The most beautiful theories are, however, fearcely reducible to practice. A lively fancy over-looks finall, though material circumstances; circumstances which retard, interrupt, and overthrow. Even a found judgment is not of itself sufficient We may project and form; may wifely weigh, and nay flart, and folve o tend to reasoning, and listen to debate. Full of the most fanguine hopes, we enter upon life. Success stands full in our view. The imagination warm and romantic. Hope gilds every opening prospect. All is active, lively, gay. We proceed, and are dif-appointed; being perfect ftrangers to real life. Experience, at last, unfolds the fallacy; and says that we are wrong. Our towering structures then fall to the ground. We are taught that the standard of estimation must be considerably lowered; facts, formerly overlooked, taken in ; every part reviewed; and a great allowance made for human imperfection. These observations are applicable to every undertaking, and will, I flatter myfelf, if properly underflood, tend to draw afide that ruinous glare, which covers a number of late, though fashionable publications. To Novels, a species of composition after which the polite world are now running mad, in which a vast number of authors feek to rest their reputation, I chiefly allude. Thefe, I am confident, have been productive of the very worst effects.

To what other cause than this can I ascribe the greatest part of those ills which degrade, instead of exalt the character; which induce ruin, instead of peace; which have often poisoned the springs of enjoyment, and occasioned the greatest uneasines and pain? They inflame the young and tender

PATRIOTICUS.

To the Printer of the Caledonian Mercury.

T Observe, with not less astonishment than indignation, in your paper of Saturday last, a proposal by the Magistrates of this city, to petition Parliament before the third day of March first, for leave to bring in a bill to affers on the inhabitants of this place a poor's rate. 'This is the fecond measure of great importance that our present rulers have attempted to force through by surprise. But the last so far exceeds the first in magnitude, as not to admit of any degree of comparison. Good God! to think of a proposal to introduce an odious and oppressive tax, which has occasioned the loudest and most continued complaints in every place where it has been tried, and which must affect every individual of this community, and his pofterity as long as they shall exist, (for it is well known that if fuch a tax be once introduced, it cannot afterwards be abolished) and that upon the short warning of a few days only, before it be possible for the lieges to have adverted to the consequences of such a bill! This is such an infult to the people, as must rouse the indignations of the meckelt mind that exists.—It is exactly of a piece with those daring, despotic, destructive measures that mark so strongly the present party, who feem determined to ruin this country by fchemes, which though they originate in ignorance, point at ruin and univerfal devastation. To guard against these evils, I call upon every man who regards either his own welfare or that of posterity, without one moment's delay, to advert to the important que-fion that now claims their attention. Some of the active tools of this cabal in London, before you can have had an opportunity of hearing one word of the matter, will have probably made the motion threatened by this inlidious propolal.—I make use of the term institution not by mistake; for you cannot be lieve, that it was not by celign that this resolve was delayed till the 18th day of February, before it was announced to you.—Let a meeting, therefore, be inflantly called; and let a petition be prepared without delay, to be prefented against the destructive measure proposed; at least, till time shall have been given to confider of it maturely. Do not forget that the delay of a day may be the cause of misery for ages. Bestir yourselves, if you do not mean to have your names transmitted to posterity as the weak betrayers of an important trust lodged for a time in your hands. Fear not the power of any man, when you exert yourfelves in defence of your just rights. Neither cunning nor deceit will be able to turn aside the Broke of justice. You now live freemen, and freemen resolve to die. Such is the determination

To the Printer of the Caledonian Mercary.

THIS being the first time I ever prefumed to trouble you with my correspondence, I flat-ter myfelf, you will not refuse me, for once, a corner in your useful paper. You frequently infert characters of new publications, with critical remarks, which makes me hope you will allow me to recommend to public notice the Sermons lately published by my old friend, Mr Charteris, minister of Wilton. Early acquainted with the genius and worth of the author, on seeing his book advertised. I promised myfelf a high enjoyment. It is generally dangerous to expect much; and it is a fure tell of merit when fuch expectations are fully gratified. It is difficult, also, to relish other fermons, after being regaled by the elegant volumes of Blair. Yet, under these difadvantages, I have again and again perufed, with great pleafure, this recent publication. Whether it be, that the partiality of a friend different, in every line, the genuine feelings of a devout heart; or, that the simplicity of the language, and originality of the manner, have some fascinating charm; or, from whatever other causeit proceeds; yet so it is, that I am inclined to assign to these Sermons a very high rank among productions of that nature. They poffefs all the excellencies of Stern, without his levity and affected peculiarities. Destitute of all ornament, and aiming only at perfpicuity, they have the fingular merit of not fatiguing the reader; and, without attempting to lay hold on the imagination, or to raife the passions, by some natural and masterly touches, they frequently reach the heart. The stile alfo, is happily varied, according to the nature of the different subjects, and always adapted to give an able energy to the fen on Devotion, Death, and Rachel Weeping for her Children, it is smooth, and fost, and soothing. In treating of the obvious duties of Temperance, Juflice, and Honesty, it is didactic and preceptive, the flile of one having authority .- The Sermon on Creation is descriptive and moral, is the natural reflections of a Christian Philosopher on that stupendous work; and those on Heart Bitterness containan interesting display of the secret springs from which it may flow, in which the author discovers an accurate knowledge of the nice sensibilities of the human heart. I can scarcely imagine that regard for an old friend has led me to bestow exaggerated praise on his works, when it has not made me infensible of their Among the chief of thefe, is his abrupt defects. manner of entering on his subject, and leaving it.

Disdaining even the shortest form of an introduction, he fometimes comes at once to the point, before the reader is prepared to accompany him, passes as abruptly to the next particular, and suddenly con-It is disagreeable to ride a horse who runs off, and flops, without warning his rider. A short fentence at the end of each head or member of difcourfe, pointing out the connection, and either a peroration, or at least an indirect intimation that the close was at hand, might have, in a great measure, reconciled us to the want of an introduction. I am also inclined to censure the extreme frugality of words, which is every where observable in those fermons. By studiously lopping off all superfluities, and rejecting every kind of ornament, the author would often incur the imputation of bordering on a hard and dry stile, were it not that the excellency of the matter conceals this defect. When with a critical eye I am able to point out no other faults, may I not venture to congratulate my countrymen on this valuable addition to the many works of merit which of late have been produced by our clergy? These lands are beautifully situated on the river Forth.

These lands are beautifully situated on the river Forth, within a quarter of an hour's walk of the town of Stirling, and consist of near 60 acres excellent carse ground, inclosed and subdivided.—There is some very thriving oak and other planting on the lands; with two orchards, pigeon-house, &c. and pleasant walks along the river side.

From the command of water, convenience for transporting all forts of goods, either by land or sea carriage, as well as being in the midst of plentiful barley and coal country, the situation of these lands is well adapted for carrying on an extensive mercantile business, or distillery or brewery; and they are now out of lease. The purchaser will enter immediately to the natural possession.
